The referee process is begun by appointing at least two (2) referees for the studies that are reviewed by the related Section Editors or the board and found suitable for the journal. Bozok Journal of Science implements the review process according to the double blind peer review system. The referee review of the studies take an average of 2-5 weeks. According to the review reports from the referees and section editors, it may be decided to accept the related studies for publication, to request correction and/or additional information from the author(s), or to reject the studies. The final decision for the studies submitted to the journal is made by the Editor-in-Chief.
